

Federal Court finally defines and provides a test for the Tax Benefit Penalty

April 19, 2021

Recently, in a dispute that Wasel & Wasel was counsel on, the Federal Primary Court ruled providing a definition and test for the 'tax benefit' penalty for the first time.

What is the 'tax benefit' penalty?

Of the various tax penalties that are applied by the Federal Tax Authority in the United Arab Emirates is the 'tax benefit penalty' which ranges between 5% to 50% of the tax liability.

The legislator included two tests under the application of the penalties under § 10(2) of table 1 of Cabinet Resolution 40/2017:

- An error had occurred; and
- A tax benefit had been obtained.

The tax legislation, and general laws of the UAE, do not define 'tax benefit', hence whether a party has or has not obtained a tax benefit that should result in the penalties has been a matter of debate.

A 'tax benefit' is described by the UNCTAD (United Nations Conference on Trade and Development) as the financial, measurable value that distinguishes the source of funding from other sources, which results in incentive tax effects that reduce the tax burden and raise the company's return.

Issue

If a tax benefit is deemed to be an increase in revenue against a reduction in a tax burden, then the question becomes should the tax benefit penalty apply if a person who submits a voluntary disclosure, or is subject of an audit, pays the value added or excise tax without having originally collected it from the end customer.

Often, tax registrants are unaware that tax needs to be applied to a particular transaction.

The awareness comes at a point of a public or private clarification, or as a result of an audit where the audit assessment informs the registrant that certain transactions should have taxable.

At times, the registrant would not have collected the tax from the customers but nonetheless pays the tax to the Federal Tax Authority as a result of voluntary disclosure or audit assessment.

In these cases, the registrant suffers a tax detriment as they would have paid the taxes without having collected said taxes from their consumers, leaving the registrant in a negative financial position with respect to their tax position.

Judgment

Recently, in deciding on whether the tax benefit applies to a registrant company, the Federal Primary Court ruled providing a definition for the first time.

There is no explicit unified definition of 'tax benefit' in UAE legislation so the Defendant argued that a 'tax benefit' is a preferential position over other taxpayers which could arise for the purposes of § 10(2).

The Federal Primary Court concurred with the argument and ruled that the tax benefit penalty should apply:

"In order not to reap the fruit that the taxpayer does not deserve by his negligence, represented in the taxpayer obtaining a tax benefit that has not been decided for others, represented in the exploitation of the tax resources in his possession until the date of the declaration.”

The ruling provides a significant development in understanding the point at which a tax benefit is arguably triggered or not, and when the 5%, 30%, or 50% penalty should apply.

The definition provided by the Federal Primary Court also creates a test for taxpayers to consider when assessing whether the tax benefit penalty should be applied, and the threshold to which they need to substantiate to argue that no tax benefit had been obtained.

In the legislation

The tax benefit penalty applies where an error ends up “resulting in a tax benefit”.

The legislator included two tests under the application of the penalties under § 10(2) of table 1 of Cabinet Resolution 40/2017:

1. An error had occurred; and
2. A tax benefit had been obtained.

The events that could lead to a tax benefit are considered either:

- An incorrect tax return by the registrant.
- A voluntary disclosure by the person or taxpayer of errors in the tax return, tax assessment or refund application.

The tax benefit penalty is calculated as:

- 50% in case no voluntary disclosure is made if a voluntary disclosure is made after being notified of a tax audit and the Federal Tax Authority has started the tax audit process, or after being asked for information relating to the tax audit, whichever takes place first.

- 30% in case a voluntary disclosure is made after being notified of the tax audit and before the Authority starts the tax audit.
- 5% in case a voluntary disclosure is made before being notified of the tax audit by the Federal Tax Authority.
